

This year let's celebrate Valentine's Day with a love letter. But this isn't your typical love letter... here's the twist:

Your letter is to English itself!

Think about it – English has held your hand through grammar drills, pronunciation struggles and vocabulary hunts. It's been your partner in learning about fascinating cultures and expressing your unique ideas. Now it's time to shower English with some well-deserved affection.

Your task:

1. Pick an aspect of English you love: Is it the quirky idioms? The cornucopia of words? The connection you've built with other language learners through English?
2. Get creative with your language: use humour and metaphors.
3. Use vocabulary and grammar structures you're comfortable with. Focus on delivering your message clearly and with passion.
4. Share your love letter with the class! Be brave, read it aloud and let your classmates celebrate your unique English love story.
